FUND COMMENTARY - JUNE 2026

The Flagship FR Worldwide Flexible Feeder Fund returned -2.1% vs its SA CPI +3% benchmark which was up 0.95% (both in ZAR), as markets recorded a relatively flat month following roaring returns in April and May.

The biggest contributors for the month were Sezzle, Taiwan Semiconductor and Corning, while the main detractors included Iren, Servicenow, and Blu Label Unlimited.

As required by legislation, we confirm that the fund has adhered to its policy objective and strategy.

MARKET COMMENTARY

Despite an abundance of activity and news, to close out a volatile quarter, markets were fairly subdued in June. The S&P 500 declined by 0.9%, while the Nasdaq Composite declined by 2.8%, driven mainly by a pullback in semiconductor stocks and the AI trade. However, both recorded their strongest quarters in the last 6 years. The small-cap Russell 2000 was a standout performer, gaining 3.7% during the month. European returns were surprisingly strong, with the Euro Stoxx 50 index ending the month 4.6% higher. Japan's Nikkei was also strong, gaining 5.7%, while Hong Kong's Hang Seng was a notable laggard, declining by 8.5% during the quarter. Special mention must be made of the Philadelphia Semiconductor Index, which rose 92% over the past 3 months, to record its best ever quarter, as investors increasingly bet on positive returns from AI adoption.

There was much more volatility in the commodity market, as Brent crude declined by 20.8% in June and now down 38.4% over the last 3 months - back to pre-war levels, despite only a portion of flows through the Strait of Hormuz being reinstated. Gold, meanwhile, dropped 11.7% during the month and 14.1% over the quarter (its worst quarter in 13 years). The collapse has been driven by market expectations of the US Fed targeting interest rate hikes toward the end of the year, making US Treasury yields more appealing and the US Dollar (gold's pricing currency) stronger. After falling more than 20% from a recent high, gold entered a bear market for the first time in 4 years.

In terms of monetary policy, there were rate hikes from the European Central Bank (its first in 3 years), as well as the Bank of Japan, to a 31-year high of 1%. Both of these moves are in response to inflationary concerns brought about by the war in Iran. Traders are bracing for further hikes in Japan, as the Yen is currently at its lowest level against the USD since 1986. All of Japan's energy imports are priced in Dollars, further stoking energy inflation.

Rates in the US were kept steady, as new Fed Chair Warsh presided over his first Fed meeting. Consensus views were more hawkish than expected, with governors pencilling in one rate hike in 2026. US jobs numbers continue to be remarkably resilient, and GDP growth for Q1 was recently upgraded from prior estimates, providing more room for the Fed to be aggressive in its inflation-taming efforts. Some of the latest data, however, points to subdued inflation. Has Jerome Powell signed off with a perfect balancing act? The verdict is still out.

In geopolitics, the Middle East situation remains front-and-centre. While progress has been made towards a peace agreement, there remain significant barriers to overcome, with Iran's nuclear ambitions reportedly being the stickiest issue. A fragile ceasefire remains in place, interrupted by the odd barrage of strikes from both sides. This has led to a gradual reopening of the Strait of Hormuz, with the oil price giving up all of its war-era gains.
